number of them, than there did. Moreover, that he obſerved, that the Hungarian Wine, of which they had a Tun, reſiſted the Cold better, than the Peter Simen; for it was not ſo much frozen; unleſs it be, that the Butler had more care of that, than the reſt, by tranſporting it ſooner into the Stove, when he found the exceſs of Cold. Again, that one preſenting him in the March with ſome Aqua-vitæ, the Scrue of the Flagon, put to his Mouth, ſtuck ſo cloſe to his Lips, that he could not draw it off, without drawing bloud,

In a third Paper, I find theſe particulars from the ſame M. Fehre.

1. That a conſiderable perſon, one Dr. Becker, a great Lover of Curious Inquiries, has given him hopes to entertain this Philoſophical Commerce.

2. That he hath ſeen men dye in Poland and Lithuania both of Heat and Cold. And firſt, that A. 1653. in July, being with this preſent King of Poland in march from Leopoli to the Camp of Glignani, it was ſo furiouſly hot that day of their march, that it cauſed ſuch an alteration in that Regiment of Foot, which was the Kings Guard, marching moſt of them bare-foot upon Sands, that more than an hundred of them fell down altogether diſabled, whereof a dozen dyed out-right, without any other Sickneſs. Secondly, as to the Cold, that the froſt was ſo bitter, that 3 Souldiers dyed of it, A. 1665. the 2. of January, in paſſing a long Ditch: beſides, that divers perſons loſt ſome of their Lims.

The Succeſs of the Experiment of Transfuſing the Bloud of one Animal into another.

THis Experiment, hitherto look'd upon to be of an almoſt unſurmountable difficulty, hath been of late very ſucceſsfully perform'd not only at Oxford, by the directions of that expert Anatomiſt Dr. Lower, but alſo in London, by order of the R. Society, at their publick meeting in Greſham Colledge: the Deſcription of the particulars whereof, and the Method of Operation, is referred to the next Opportunity.
